

Roma to get top CSG negotiation tips

Media release: 5 August 2013

AgForce Projects' CSG team will be returning to Roma this month for the fourth time in a year to deliver much-needed CSG negotiation support to landholders.

A CSG negotiation support workshop will be held in Roma on Thursday 22 August from 9am – 1pm and is free and open to all landholders.

AgForce Projects CSG project officer Daniel Phipps said with the industry continuing to expand in the region, landholders need access to independent information and support more than ever.

"We continue to get requests to return to the region to deliver this information, which is a clear sign that more and more landholders are being impacted by this industry," Mr Phipps said.

"CSG is a serious issue for landholders and we want to make sure they are aware of their rights and understand how to exercise those rights in order to protect their farming enterprise."

Mr Phipps said the negotiation support workshops will give landholders the tools they need to achieve a fair conduct and compensation agreement (CCA).

"Dealing with a CSG company can be very daunting and like most Queenslanders, primary producers don't have extensive legal knowledge or negotiation experience," Mr Phipps said.

"This series of information sessions is about arming landholders with the best and most practical set of tools going into negotiations. We will give landholders the information they need to help assess the potential impacts of CSG activity on their property, provide detailed negotiation tips and help landholders prepare property information to use when negotiating a CCA."

Registrations essential, visit www.agforceprojects.org.au

ENDS

Photo Caption: CSG project officer Daniel Phipps

These workshops are delivered by AgForce Projects with the support of the Queensland Government, the GasFields Commission Queensland and Australian Petroleum Production and Exploration Association.

For comment call Daniel Phipps on 0428 189 086.

Media contact: AgForce Projects communications officer Madeline Cooper (07) 3238 6060 or 0488 002 091